Air Fares Lowered For Students Airline Gets Set For Jet Set

High school and college students throughout the nation are signing up for travel at half-fare on American Airlines. The far-reaching new American Youth Plan, approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, was to become effective on January 27th.

Key to nationwide, half-fare travel for anyone from age 12 to 22 is the Youth Fare Identification Card. The cards are available at $3 each from American's ticket offices coast to coast, representatives on hundreds of college campuses, some travel agencies and from a special mail-order center at the airline's New York headquarters.

Officials of the airline said that more than 33 million young Americans are in the eligible age bracket.

The nation's two largest hotel chains--the Sheraton and the Hilton--have announced they are backing the plan and will give card holders special rates and privileges under a wide variety of conditions.

Any holder of an identification card can purchase, on a standby basis, a ticket for travel anywhere on American Airlines' domestic system. Qualification for the card is simple; any document which offers legal proof of age, and three dollars are all that's needed. The card may be purchased by mail, and validation will be made at the American Airlines installation the card holders uses to make his first trip. Validation, of course, calls for proof of age.

As part of the plan American Airlines is producing a 64-page booklet, to be distributed free, entitled "Go Go American," which explains the plan and perhaps equally important, gives the card holder a look at the country from the teenage point of view--or, where the action is. In addition, the book has up to $200 worth of discount coupons for amusement parks, restaurants, etc., around the nation.

In New York and Los Angeles, on January 27, American was to open teen lounges in its terminals at Kennedy and Los Angeles International Airports, especially designed and equipped places in which card

Dr. Rogers Speaks At WTA Meeting

Dr. Charlotte Rogers spoke to a group of West Tennessee Association of Attendance Teachers, at Paris Landing February 3.

The topic of her speech was "The High School Dropout." In the speech, Dr. Rogers, took into account the role of the attendance teacher and also some of the causes of dropouts. She expressed some of the major reasons why students drop out of school which are: low economic status, low intelligence, emotional instability and personal defects and inability to adjust to curriculum.

Another important fact according to Dr. Rogers, was that it is always the duty of every person to be ready to assist anyone at anytime to prevent dropout because frequently it is a classmate who prevents someone from committing such a foolish act.

Coach To Be Guest At Alumni Dinner

The annual alumni dinner for University of Tennessee alumni will be held February 22 preceding Carnicus, according to Harold Brundige president of the Weakley County Chapter of the Alumni Association.

According to Brundige, a film of the UT-UCLA football game in Memphis this fall will be a special feature of the dinner.

The dinner will be held in the Fieldhouse at 5:30 p.m. The film will be shown at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets are $1.25 per person. Reservations are required in advance and may be made by contacting either Mr. Brundige or Lewis Larsen, alumni placement officer.

Placement Office Offers New Jobs

New employment opportunities are available through the Alumni and Placement Office, according to Lewis Larsen, alumni and placement officer.

The United States Civil Service Commission will have an examination for Soil Conservationist trainee, Soil scientist trainee, engineer trainee and range conservationist. Students should file their applications with the Board of Civil Service Examiners having jurisdiction over the option and over their state of residence. Further information may be obtained in the Placement Office.

Unions: Enter But No Exit?

NOTE: This article does not necessarily reflect the editorial policy of this newspaper.

When you graduate and go to work, are you going to be forced into joining a union against your will? You might have to. Whether you want to or not. There has been much talk in the last few months about section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act simply because of the influence it has over millions of workers.

Briefly stated, 14(b) gives a worker the right to choose whether he wants to join a union or not.

There is move in Congress to repeal section 14(b) which would give the unions unlimited powers in forming union shops. But even as important as this is, this is not the paramount question.

The most important question is whether a worker will be given a freedom of choice in deciding whether he wants to join a union. Many politicians claim that 14(b) is unpopular throughout the country. This is not so. The right-to-work laws are in practice in 19 of our 50 states today. Many politicians claim the 14(b) is unconstitutional. This is not so. Countless times the courts throughout the land has upheld the constitutionality of 14(b).

In the words of our President, "The promise of America is opportunity for our people," is a fine precept. However, many has been the time where this has not been the case simply due to union intervention.

For instance, in 1963, Douglas Aircraft in California was forced, by a vote of the workers, to require all of its employees to either join a union or pay union dues. When 30 workers would not do either, they were fired, even though each averaged having been with the company for over 25 years.

If 14(b) was repealed it would compel American working men and women to join unions, or to pay union dues, even though it would be against their will and belief.

It would compel workers to join even in many instances where a majority involved do not desire "union security" clauses in their contract or in fact do not even desire union representation.

The initiative of union leaders to work for the benefit of the employees would be lessened because the unions would know that the worker had to accept him.

Our national policy of freedom of choice would be contrary to what we profess and contrary to other democratic countries such as Austria, Denmark, and Belgium where compulsory unionism is prohibited by their constitutions.

It could provide organized labor with the additional economic and political power to secure its real objective--abolition of the ban on the "closed shop."

It would result in increased strikes, picketing and general violence, especially in the 19 states--of which Tennessee is one--where right to work laws are in force.

Of all the businesses in the country, 99% of them could be classed as "small business." Repealing 14(b) would adversely affect these businesses that can not operate under union domination.

The question before us is not whether one should be anti-union or not, but whether we desire to continue to have our freedom of choice.

Valentines-Once A Festival

By PAT CHAMBERLAIN

Gather around all you sweet-hearts! Are you aware that the "day of love expression" is almost here. You well know it's time for sweets for the sweet or a buzz to the florist for those special flowers or maybe just a lovely card with verses meant just for that special someone. No matter what the choice, all are tokens of love expression for that day, February 14.

This is an insight into our mode of celebration, but just for a few moments let's turn pages of time and see how others viewed St. Valentine's Day. To begin, St. Valentine is the name given to three different martyrs whose feast day falls on February 14. The first was a Roman priest and doctor who was beheaded about A.D. 269. In Rome about A.D. 273 another bishop was beheaded. Thirdly, there was an African martyr about whom little was known.

In the Roman festival, it was once the custom to draw lots to decide which young men and women should be each others "valentine". Couples exchanged gifts; and in some cases, they even became engaged to be married.

The sentimental valentines, gifts of flowers, and candy given in celebration of Valentine's Day in the U. S. is different from Roman festivities. However, the mode of celebration is not of concern as much as the expression of love on which we are to focus our attention. Let us not forget to express our love this Valentine's Day or forget the universality of the celebration of the day of love, St. Valentine's Day.

Nelson And Neal To Lecture Mon.

They will spend the day teaching and lecturing, as part of their faculty artist activities with the University. The lectures are designed to be of specific interest to the college students, but music teachers and students not affiliated with the university are welcome. No fee will be charged for attendance.

The lectures and demonstration lessons will be in the UTMB Music Building Auditorium, with one exception: the lecture "Can You Write A Book?" will be scheduled in room 207 in the Engineering-Physical Sciences Building. The day's events will be scheduled as follows:

10:00 A.M. Lecture: Secrets of Public Performance Mr. Neal discusses methods of overcoming nerves, stage-fright, etc. and successfully reaching one's audience in non-musical performances as well as musical ones.

11:00 A.M. Lecture: Musical Styles in Piano Literature an illustrated lecture by Miss Nelson, of particular interest to the pianist, but worthwhile to the musical layman as well.

1:00 P.M. Lecture: Secrets of Ensemble Playing. The duopianists discuss and illustrate rehearsal and performance techniques that produce good ensemble.

2:00 P.M. Demonstration Lessons UTMB piano students perform and receive critical analysis and musical and technical advice useful to the witnessing group as well as to the individual who is studying the composition.

4:00 P.M. Lecture: Can You Write a Book? Mr. Neal, who has published a best-selling autobiography, discusses techniques that produce good creative writing that will sell.

Field Maneuvers Slated For Sat.

The advance ROTC cadets will hold field maneuvers on campus Saturday morning, February 12.

The morning hours will be spent teaching the cadet the basic techniques needed to protect himself from the enemy. In this they will learn how to approach and attack an enemy through fire and maneuver.

The cadets will also run a map course in which they will have practical work of mapreading knowledge already acquired. The cadets will start from a known point with only a compass and proceed to a previously marked place.

Airline Gets Set For Jet Set holders can assemble and relax before their flights.

Marion Sadler, president of American, in announcing American's drive for card sales, said: "The CAB's action, as we see it, is confirmation of our own belief that the young people of this country are ready to travel by air, if the price is right for them. And that's what our Youth Plan is all about; we want to get the young people flying and we want to make it easy for them. And from our point of view, young people converted to air travel are our future customers."

Sadler pointed out that the American Youth Plan also is a direct contribution to President Johnson's "Discover America" program, offering 33 million young Americans a chance to see their country at the lowest travel rates ever offered. At the same time, the plan is available to any foreign youngster between 12 and 22 and this, Sadler said, could add heavily to the list of overseas visitors this year.

This is the way the plan works:

1. American's Youth Plan was to become effective on January 27. From that time on, any holder of a Youth Plan Identification Card may purchase a ticket, at half the jet coach fare, for travel anywhere on American Airlines' domestic system on a standby basis. He or she will be boarded after regular revenue passengers and military standbys.

2. Youth Plan Cards are now available at any American Airlines ticket office. In addition, they may be purchased by mail, from American Airlines, Youth Plan Headquarters, 633 Third Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017. These cards must be validated, using legal proof of age, at any American Airlines ticket office before first use.

3. "Go Go American," the 64-page booklet detailing the "action areas" for teenagers around the country, is available at American Airlines ticket offices, or by mail, from Youth Plan Headquarters. The booklet is free.

4. A special campus program is being staged by the National Employment Services Institute which maintains representatives at hundreds of colleges and universities throughout the country.

5. The Youth Fare plan will not be in effect on a few days of the year when heavy passenger loads cut the availability of seats for standbys. These would include, in 1966, April 7 (Thursday before Easter Sunday); Nov. 23 and 27 (Wednesday before and Sunday after Thanksgiving Day), and Dec. 15 through 21.

Research Expected To Lead To History Of Weakley Co.

Writing the history of Weakley County is expected to result from research begun several months ago at The University of Tennessee Martin Branch, Chancellor Paul Meek said yesterday.

Work on the project, initiated several years ago, was resumed in July 1965 by Wayne Tansil, associate professor of history and associate director of public relations at UTMB Chancellor Meek said.

It is expected that it will take at least two years to complete the research before the writing of the history can be undertaken.

Chancellor Meek pointed out that in a sense UTMB is attempting to pay back part of the debt owed to all the citizens of Weakley County, including Martin. The debt includes the $200,000 provided by the County of Weakley and the City of Martin to purchase the buildings and grounds of Hall-Moody College from the Baptist when they decided in 1927 to close the college and center their higher educational interests on Union University in Jackson. Since that time the citizens of Weakley County have continued to support UTMB. The latest manifestation of this support was the voluntary contribution of $150,000 to the building of the stadium.

Chancellor Meek said the advice and support of the Tennessee Historical Commission and the Tennessee Historical Society have been sought in carrying on the research for the history. Microfilms, U.S. Census Reports, original documents in the Tennessee Library and Archives and from the archives of other states, county records, and older histories are being sought out and researched for the Weakley County history project.

Also being sought as primary source materials are the personal records in the hands of individual citizens in the county. Some of these may include family histories, land grant information, and other materials. Genealogies furnish valuable historical background material. Information relating to Indian camp sites and artifacts and pioneers tools and household equipment are also necessary for writing a definitive history of Weakley County.

General topics of the history of Weakley County will include the pioneers themselves, their character and composition and where they lived before coming to the county. Other subjects to be treated will include the establishing of the county in 1823 following a petition to the legislature signed by approximately 243 heads of families and other men who were already living in what then was a western extension of Henry County.

Republicans Hear Don Dickenson At Last Meeting

"Idealism is one thing, but you must mix it with practicality," said Mr. Don Dickenson, the Chairman of the Henry County Republicans, speaking to the University Young Republican Club Monday night.

Speaking on party unity, organization, and the need for young people, Dickenson went on to say, "What we need in Tennessee, especially in West Tennessee, is a better party organization. We have come a long way, but there is much to do." He said that the Republican party is capturing the interest of the younger generation.

Also at that meeting, Chairman Allen Strawbridge announced that Mr. Julius Hurst, the Chairman of the State Republican Executive Committee will soon be visiting the campus to speak to the club.

As It Looks From Here

By BILL BENSON

I was talking to some basketball men a few days ago about tonight's battle with Union.

The conversation soon centered on school spirit, or shall I say, the lack of it. "If some students can get out and make noise for an inter-fraternity or sorority game, I don't understand why they won't do the same for us," one cager lamented. You know, that's a good question, and I wish someone would answer it for men.

The cheerleaders have initiated a "Hollerin' Hundred Club" to help stimulate spirit at home games, but barely have enough there to lead in a cheer. A school of this size should sustain a "Hollerin' Five-Hundred Club."

Tonight's ball game has all the ingredients necessary to generate high velocity Tennessee Spirit.

If they wish, the entire Student body can play the role of the sixth man on the court.

I challenge each fraternity, each sorority, the "Hollerin' Hundred" and every other student to change my opinion of what can only be considered as pathetic Tennessee Spirit.

The championship of the VSAC western division hangs on tonight's tilt. Don't let our Vols down and they'll do likewise.

Bill Fron Is Winner Of Free-Throw Tourney

The finals of the men's free-throw tournament was held last Tuesday night in the new gym.

Bill Fron, a senior in Business Administration from Wheaton, Illinois, was the winner with 45 out of a possible 50 baskets.

Vol Frosh Split Two Home Games

The Vol freshman team split their two home games last week edging Christian Brothers College and dropping a tinger to the Fulton Independents.

Forward Joey Fulks and center Ron Wilcox paced the frosh over CBC with 23 and 15 points respectively. The frosh triumph revenged an earlier 76-62 setback in Memphis by the baby Bucs.

In the preliminary game Saturday afternoon the orangemen grabbed a commanding 43-34 lead at intermission only to see costly floor mistakes and erratic shooting allow the Independents to trim the Volunteers 84-83.

A short/jumper by Bob Seay nudged Fulton into the lead with only seconds remaining handing the first yearment the fourth loss of the season.

Fulks, Wilcox, Sczypczenski, and Sled all netted double figures with 20, 19, 14 and 11 markers each.

Seary and Wray lead both quintets tallying 31 and 22.

Defeat Of Delta Keeps Home Record Spotless

The Vols kept their spotless home record intact this past week and are hard at practice preparing to entertain Union University Thursday night.

The Volunteers clipped CBC Thursday, 75-63, and Delta State College, 75-65, Saturday night to boost their overall record to 8-6 and the VSAC slate to 5-2 for the year.

Hitting almost fifty percent of their floor shots, the Orangemen jumped to a slim but steady 33-26 lead at half-time. Senior guard Ron Armstrong poured in 14 of his 20 points in the first half to pace the Volunteers to their conference win.

Center Micky Martin followed with 12 points, and Don Glover, Byron Kuehner, and Robert Barger added 11, 11 and 10 respectively.

Moore Landers netted six markers, Pat Taylor sank three and Don Burnette bagged two for the balance.

Saturday night UTMB wasted little time in heading Delta College. The Vols jumped to a 9-1 margin with only three minutes gone in the opening stanza and led the remainder of the contest.

Three tall Vols shot in double figures with center Micky Martin hitting 17. Close behind were Armstrong with 15 markers and Don High with 11.

UTMB cagers will host the current VSAC leader, Union University, Thursday night in a game which may decide the western division crown.
